

Why this form?

Your employer or benefits agency deducts payroll taxes from your salary or social security income. Payroll taxes is the collective name for payroll tax/social insurance contributions, employee insurances and the income-related health insurance contribution. For the deduction your employer or benefits agency must register your personal data. With this form you provide this information. Furthermore you should specify if you want your employer to apply the payroll tax deduction. In that case the employer may deduct less payroll tax / social insurance contributions from your salary.

If you do not provide the data
If you do not provide your personal data - or wrong data - your employer or benefits agency must apply 52% payroll tax/social insurance contributions. This is the highest tax rate. In addition, your employer must calculate the employee insurance premiums and income-related health insurance contribution over your entire salary. This also applies if you do not identify yourself.

Complete and submit

Complete this form, sign it and return it to your employer or benefits agency. This should be done at the latest the day before your first workday. If you are going to work the same day, return this form before you start working. If you receive a social security income, you must submit this statement before the first payment. When submitting this statement, you must identify yourself. So bring a valid proof of identity.

Please note!
If something changes in your data after you have submitted this form, you must notify so to your employer in writing. A new "Statement data for the payroll taxes" needs to be completed by you.

Clarification of the questions

Question 2
Every employee and benefits recipient is entitled to a tax reduction, the so called payroll tax deduction. Your employer or benefits agency will automatically calculate the deduction that applies for you. You receive this deduction from one employer or benefits agency at the time only. Specify whether you want to have the payroll tax deduction applied by this employer or benefits agency.

Payroll tax deduction and estimated tax assessment
Are you going to work and do you receive the general tax deduction every month from us through an estimated tax assessment? Then you should immediately review or stop this estimated tax assessment. Otherwise, you may get too much payroll tax deduction because your employer also deducts a (part of) the general tax deduction. If you have received too much general tax deduction you have to pay this amount back to us.

Payroll tax deduction and old age pension
If you are a single person or a single parent receiving an old age pension, you may be entitled to the single-elderly deduction. In that case it would be best to have the payroll tax deduction applied by the Social Insurance Bank.

Payroll tax deduction and social security income
Are you going to work beside your social security income? Then you are obliged to have your employer apply the payroll tax deduction, for the municipal social services will do so only if your employer cannot fully apply the payroll tax deduction.

Please note!
- You are not obliged to use the payroll tax deduction, unless you are going to work alongside a social security income.
- If you do not use the payroll tax deduction, you may reclaim the possible surplus of paid taxes after the calendar year via your return income tax / social insurance contributions.
